Cultural Landscapes: Current issues and approaches in international practice A one day professional update and new book launch

Date: Friday 27 April 2012

Venue: Sir Roland Wilson Building, Australian National University, Canberra

Time: 9.00 am – 5.00 pm

Cost: The event cost is $330 person or $264 student (including GST)

Details: This Professional Update session will focus on current issues and approaches in international practice in relation to the concept of cultural landscapes. It is timed to mark the twentieth anniversary of the adoption of the World Heritage category of cultural landscape. It will also celebrate the launch of Managing Cultural Landscapes, a comprehensive study of current issues and approaches worldwide edited by Ken Taylor and Jane Lennon.

This workshop will critically examine the concept of cultural landscape as applied to local, national and World Heritage conservation and how it has evolved. It will provide opportunities for discussion of current examples of the use of the cultural landscape concept and key issues that have emerged. The discussion will be informed by a range of intriguing and challenging case studies from Australasia and the Asia-Pacific presented by leading heritage practitioners. This session on cultural landscapes is directed at cultural heritage site managers and professionals working on heritage issues in government and private practice, practitioners who intend to work in this area in the future and seek to be better informed, academics and students at tertiary institutions offering heritage programs.
