

ADVANCED STONEMASONRY & CONSERVATION WORKSHOPS

Register your expression of interest now

Courses in Traditional Stonemasonry and Conservation, aimed at developing the knowledge of the craft amongst people who are working in the construction industry, are being held at various times and locations during the 2012-2013 year.

The Construction Industry Training Board (CITB) is supporting this training as part of its Heritage Trades Programme.

- If you have attended a previous stonemasonry course and wish to attend an advanced stonemasonry course, then register now.
- If you wish to attend a conservation workshop which will include blacksmithing, timber conservation and other artisan trades to be listed, then register now.
- If you wish to attend a basic stonemasonry course, register now. A fee of $395 will apply

All Heritage Trades Programmes are structured around 3 important elements

1. A comprehensive theory session where underpinning knowledge in conservation techniques and the stone industry is addressed to the participants in their chosen subject.
2. This underpinning knowledge is put to practical use on historical buildings so that an understanding is gained of the principles of the artisan trades. The participants are mentored through this process by the experienced trainers.
3. A representative from the project addresses the participants detailing the history of the building. This person will outline important historical points about both the building and its previous occupants so the participants gain a real understanding of its historical value and a feel for how the structure was built and maintained throughout its life.

Eligibility: If you currently have a CITB number or are in the construction industry and therefore eligible for a CITB number, you will receive the CITB support subsidy (out of pocket cost TBA). Eligibility requirements are that participants are available for the full duration of the course and can provide their own transport to the designated work site.

Places for this course are limited and venues and dates will be forwarded once courses are filled.

All participants will receive a certificate of attendance upon completion.
