The Getty Conservation Institute (GCI), works internationally to advance conservation practice in the visual arts, broadly interpreted to include objects, collections, architecture, and sites. It serves the conservation community through scientific research, education and training, model field projects, and the broad dissemination of the results of both its own work and the work of others in the field.

The GCI is pleased to announce a new employment opportunity for emerging conservation professionals: GCI Professional Fellowships. Made possible through one-time funding, the GCI is making available three Professional Fellowships, each of three-year duration, from June 2017 to May 2020. The successful candidates will work at the Getty Center in Los Angeles, California.

The GCI Professional Fellowships are designed to provide emerging practitioners with in-depth opportunities to build and strengthen their skills and experience as conservation professionals, while working under the guidance of experienced GCI staff. GCI Professional Fellows will participate in the ongoing work of the GCI as full members of the Getty's professional community. Professional development will be encouraged and assisted through participation in professional meetings, conferences, or workshops. Fellows' research outcomes will be disseminated through publications and conference presentations.

Fellowships Available:

- Managing Collection Environments Initiative (Job# 2016-2882)
- Asian and European Lacquer Analysis project (Job # 2016-2884)
- Conserving Modern Architecture Initiative (Job# 2016-2885)

Applications are accepted via the Getty's Job Opportunities site. Please consult the links above to read full position descriptions and requirements for each fellowship and to submit an application and supporting materials.

Candidates will be selected on a competitive basis. An excellent benefits package and salary commensurate with qualifications and experience will be provided.

Completed application materials must be received on or before January 31, 2017.

If you have specific questions about the Professional Fellowships, please email gcistaffing@getty.edu.
