Cascade Female Factory Launches New Website

The Cascades Female Factory's new website is part of connecting visitors to the stories of the site through the full consumer journey. Take a moment to reacquaint yourself with the stories at femalefactory.org.au. Tour booking and products are also now fully bookable online, and a range of educational resources are also available for students and teachers and school group visits can also be booked online. The website is fully optimised for mobile screens with video content and social media channels available from the homepage. This new website completes the new suite Coal Mines Historic Site and Port Arthur Historic Site website which also launched earlier this year.

PRESENTATION: Utopia in Tasmania

Thursday 7 June 2018 | 1:00pm – 2:00pm | Ground floor, 91 Murray Street (LINC Tasmania)

Has it been possible for people to find utopia in Tasmania? Depending on the definition of the slippery concept of 'utopia', yes – for a variety of people in different ways. Historian Dr Alison Alexander looks at versions of utopia from the Aboriginal experience and the convicts' dream to David Walsh's MONA.

PRESENTATION: Pugh Day Lecture – Anaesthesia and Overseas Aid

Sunday 17 June 2018 | 2:00pm | Meeting Room, QVMAG at Inveresk

In a very simplistic sense Dr William Russ Pugh travelled from England to Launceston in 1835 to ultimately bring overseas aid in the form of the administration of the first general anaesthetic for surgical procedures in Australia. Tasmanians have an extraordinary record of providing anaesthesia aid to other countries around the world. Dr Colin Chilvers AM, current Chair of the Tasmanian Regional Committee of the Australian and New Zealand College of Anaesthetists, will cover the history of aid from Tasmania and highlight the work of Tasmanian anaesthetists who volunteer to work and teach with different organisations in a variety of countries. Dr Pugh, of course, will have a place in the story. Admission $4 for non-members.

History Seminar: Presented by Oral History Tasmania

Saturday 4 August 2018 | 10:30am – 2:30pm | Meeting Room, QVMAG at Inveresk
