

Research and collections in a connected world

24-28 September 2012, University of Adelaide, South Australia

In a connected world information is everywhere. How can museums and galleries contribute to the needs of a world that is awash with information but hungry for meaning?

The 2012 Museums Australia National Conference, "Research and collections in a connected world", will explore the potential of research:

- By museums: the role of collections and curatorial expertise in understanding current global challenges such as climate change;
- With museums: research collaborations with industry, academia, government and community;
- About museums: how the process and outcomes of research can transform the social, economic and educational role of museums in a rapidly-changing world.

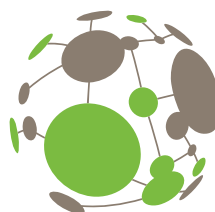

Registration is open

Early bird closes 13 July 2012

Museums Australia National Conference
2012 acknowledges the support of

Government of South Australia
Arts SA

MUSEUMS AUSTRALIA
NATIONAL CONFERENCE
Research and collections
in a connected world

2012