

Senior Heritage Consultant

- Established team with strong career development opportunities
- Be truly influential in strategically advising a diverse range of clients
- Brand new office in premium Sydney CBD location

An opportunity has arisen in our Sydney office for a suitably qualified and experienced Senior Consultant with a professional work history of 5+ years in Heritage advisory consulting or related field.

Urbis is a firm that truly values its people. In our new, contemporary office location in the heart of Sydney's CBD, it's a place where you are encouraged to share your ideas in a professional, friendly and agile working environment.

We are looking for a lateral thinker and an outstanding communicator seeking an opportunity to be involved in city-shaping projects, for a diverse range of private and public sector clients. As a key member of the team, you will be involved in conducting research across a diverse, high profile and challenging range of projects, providing reports and strategic advice to our clients. Some of the key projects Urbis has collaborated on include:

- The Intercontinental Hotel
- The former GPO at 1 Martin Place, Sydney
- The Lands and Education Building
- Cloud Arch
- City Tattersalls
- AMP Quay Quarter
- Queen Victoria Building
- Capitol Theatre
- Butterfly Room at the State Theatre
- Central Park, Chippendale
- The Toll House, Centennial Park

We also encourage archaeologists (Aboriginal or European) or heritage architects to apply for this position.

About You

As a Senior Heritage Consultant there is a requirement to demonstrate an in depth understanding of Heritage principles and an ability to provide a range of advice to clients on a range of projects including heritage studies, conservation management plans, heritage impact statements, interpretation, archival recording and heritage architectural conservation supervision.

As a Senior Consultant, your responsibilities will include:

- Working autonomously on mid-level projects and provide advice to clients;
- Working across a wide range of applications with proven ability to develop proposals, assistant tenders & submissions for potential projects;
- Directing and assisting more junior staff with assessments; and
- Leading projects including the undertaking of project, client and other stakeholder relationships, working to specification and deadlines.

- The successful candidate will be required to demonstrate the following competencies:
- Detailed understanding of Heritage design principles and the ability to apply them;
- Strong understanding of and the ability to apply appropriate statutory heritage and planning legislation to heritage issues, particularly the Heritage Act 1977;
- Excellent client, project and time management skills;
- Generate innovative solutions to situations, and effectively explore alternatives and positions to reach outcomes that gain the support and acceptance of all parties;
- Undertake heritage research utilising multiple sources and methodologies, and present a preliminary assessment of findings;
- Research, problem solve and think laterally;
- Strong report writing and communication skills;
- Understanding of architectural styles, fabric identification and analysis and building conservation; and,
- Write Heritage Impact Statements, Heritage Assessments and Conservation Management Plans

Other non-essential but beneficial skills applicable to the role (depending on background and experience) include;

- Architect or architectural drafting experience (autocad);
- European or Aboriginal archaeological experience; and.
- Photoshop skills.
