On the eve of the Imagined pasts, Imagined Futures Australia ICOMOS Conference, join us for a conversation about where heritage is heading. This is a great opportunity to join an informal discussion with two of the world's most respected figures in heritage conservation, Canada's Christina Cameron and Australia's Sharon Sullivan. The interview will be led by Deakin University's Research Professor of Cultural Heritage, Tim Winter, and University of Canberra's Tracy Ireland, and there will be plenty of opportunities for questions from the floor. Starting with a discussion about World Heritage and issues arising from the last World Heritage Committee meeting in Cambodia, the conversation will go on to consider what the future holds for local and national heritage in Canada, Australia and the region.

Christina Cameron is Professor in the School of Architecture and Canada Research Chair in Built Heritage at the University of Montreal, where she teaches and directs a research programme on heritage conservation. Her current research focuses on documenting the origins and early implementation of UNESCO's World Heritage Convention and examining heritage conservation practice in Canada from 1950 to 2000. Since the 1970s, she has published extensively on Canadian architecture, heritage management and World Heritage. She is Vice-President of the Advisory Committee for Official Residences of Canada, a board member of Willowbank School for Restoration Arts, a patron of the African World Heritage Fund and Vice-President of the Canadian Commission for UNESCO.

Professor Tim Winter

Tim is Research Professor of Cultural Heritage at the Cultural Heritage Centre for Asia and the Pacific, Deakin University, Melbourne. He has published widely on these themes and conducted research projects in a number of countries in Asia, including Sri Lanka, Cambodia, Kashmir and China. His recent books include The Routledge Handbook of Heritage in Asia and Shanghai Expo: an international forum on the future of cities.
